POINTS ABOUT A BULLFROG.

How He "Hollers" and How He Wears His Teeth on His Backbone.

"Do you know how a bullfrog bellows?" said an ex-Magistrate Camp last night as he spread out his legs and joined in the conversation of the thrice-week group in front of the Willard hotel.

"Now, most people think that when a bullfrog bellows he is lying upon a big rock just blowing off. That's not so. When a frog bellows he is lying flat on the water, this way," and the speaker spread out his broad palm. "I've seen 'em. You know he has a sort of wattle under his throat. Well, he lifts that up about half full of water and blows out the air through it. You've all put water in a bottle and then blown into it?" There was no response, but Mr. Camp continued: "You know how that sounds. Well, a frog bellows in that same way, and it sounds just like blowing in a bottle partly filled with water. Just the way I—and the speaker expanded his own 'wattle' and gave an imitation so natural as to alarm the cook in the hotel kitchen.

"Do you know where a frog's teeth are?" continued Squire Camp, encouraged by the absence of argument.

"In his belly," somebody suggested.

"No. A frog's teeth," resumed Squire Camp impressively, "are just about the middle of his backbone, between his hind and fore legs."—Louisville Courier Journal.

Japanese: English.

Commander Wilde, United States navy, presented to his kinwoman, Miss Louise Wihington of North Boston, a silk handkerchief which some enterprising merchant in Yokohama furnishes to patrons for advertising purposes. As an illustration of Japanese English the following words which decorate the four sides of the border are unique and worthy of preservation in print:

"My shop was constantly trading the various clothes of the domestic and the foreigner. Although I was advised by the every foreigner, at this time I have made the nice handkerchief of the different species silk and begun to sell it. Then I was observed with the honor on the several portions. Thence whatever will perform truly for something, and it will sell lower price for everybody's wants. Please I beg consequently to obtain the more favors and the many produce. But like all colors of the handkerchiefs that be done by the one method will by free ruthless for washing it."—Boston Commonwealth.

A Turfman's Tale.

A New Jerseyman told me a good story the other day on one of our foremost turfmen, a man whose name is perhaps printed oftener than that of any other connected with racing in America. A good many years ago this turfman, who was not then deep in the racing business, arrived in Jersey City with a trunkful of mustangs from the plains of Texas. He knew nothing of the laws of the state nor of the ordinances of the city. He knew that he wanted to sell his mustangs and thought the best way to do it was to sell them at auction. Being somewhat gifted in speech, he determined that he would be his own auctioneer. The sale started out well. Fair prices were realized. Suddenly it was interrupted by policemen, who demanded a view of our friend's license.

"License?" he said amazed. "What license? I haven't any license of any kind."

"Well, you can't sell horses in this city without a license. You'll have to come along. No monkey business with us."

Of course he went along, but he was lucky enough to find at court a friend (a lawyer), who went bail for him in the sum of $50. Then the lawyer said:

"A license costs $250. You are under bonds. Go ahead and finish your sale, collect your money and skip out. Give me $50 to settle the forfeited bond, and you are $200 ahead of the game."

It was done accordingly. The turfman and his friend met in the St. James hotel lately and laughed over the joke.

Cutting it Short.

A barber's shop is sometimes a trying place for men who dislike to hear other people gossip. The barber, especially if he has a little shop and is alone, must talk to his customers. Here is a scene in a country barber's shop, a full beard and rather sour looking gentleman being in the chair.

"Hair cut," says the customer.

"All right, sir. How'll you have it cut?"

"Short."

"H'm—party short, or only mid-dle?"

"Very short."

"H'm—I wouldn't if I was you, sir."

"Why not?"

"I don't think very short hair would suit you at all well, sir."

"Oh, yes, it would. It would suit me exactly."

"H'm—what makes you think so, sir?"

"Because I shouldn't have to come here for a long time."

"Oh!" The barber cuts away in silence and very short. —London Tit-Bits.

Nail biting, according to a French doctor, is hereditary. Almost one-third of the French school children bite their nails, and the girls are worse than the boys.

MACKAY'S GIFT.

It is announced that John W. Mackay, the bonanza millionaire, has sent to the city of Nancy, France, a large sum of money to be expended in erecting a statue of Joan of Arc, the Maid of Orleans. The sculptor Lorraine has been engaged to devise the statue, and it is to be erected upon the square where in 1429 the Maid offered prayers to her patron saint.

Joanne d'Arc was a heroine and a patriot. She led the French troops to victory against the enemies of her country. She routed the English, who were besieging Orleans, but a year later was captured by the English. The University of Paris decided that she should be tried for sorcery, and solicited letters patent from the King of England to conduct the trial. She was convicted and publicly burned in the market place at Rouen and her ashes thrown into the Seine. Subsequently she was pronounced a martyr to her religion, her country and her king, and now John W. Mackay has furnished the money to commemorate her memory in marble or in bronze, and the patriotic Maid of Orleans, who was burned at the stake as a heretic 464 years ago, is immortalized as a martyr.

While no one will object to the gift of a statue of Joanne d'Arc to the city of Nancy by Mr. Mackay, as it is better, perhaps, that a part of his millions should be spent in commemorating the valiant deeds of the Maid of Orleans than in feasting the snobs of London and Paris, yet people in this State cannot forbear commenting upon the fact that neither Mr. Mackay nor any other of those who made their millions in Nevada, contribute any part of their great wealth to the relief of distress in this State or to endowing its University so that poor but deserving boys and girls could acquire an education at a nominal expense.

COUNTERFEITING.

Chief Hazen of the Treasury Department in his annual report shows that 808 arrests were made during the year for violations of the statutes against counterfeiting. One hundred and eighty-one persons were convicted; 119 pleaded guilty; 74 are awaiting trial; 51 are awaiting examination; 69 were discharged by United States Commissioners and 84 were acquitted by juries.

The representative value of altered and counterfeit notes and counterfeit coins captured during the year was about $5,000,000.

The inducements to engage in establishing private mints on the principle on which illicit distilleries are conducted, are very great. The moonshiner who runs an illicit distillery makes as good quality of firewater as the licensed distiller, but he evades the tax of 95 cents per gallon on whisky, consequently the profit is large. A mint run on private account with fine silver at 67 cents an ounce, can turn out as good coins as the United States mint and make a profit of nearly one hundred per cent in the business. An excellent way to prevent counterfeiting is to open the mints to silver as well as to gold and get more money in circulation. As it is now in many parts of the country genuine money is so scarce that counterfeiters attempt to supply the deficiency with counterfeit notes and spurious coins, and it costs the Government a large amount of money to prevent them from succeeding.

PROSPEROUS MEXICO.

The Treasury Department of the Mexican Government has published a statement of the foreign commerce of the country for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1895. As compared with the previous year, it shows an increase of $3,713,000 in imports and an increase of $11,511,700 in exports. The excess of exports over imports was $56,854,513. The country is prosperous, the balance of trade being in its favor, and there is no necessity for issuing bonds for gold to maintain its credit abroad.

The Mexican Mint coins gold and silver free. Though its exports amount to millions and are purchased by single standard gold countries, the country is not flooded with silver; in fact Mexican dollars are exported to China and Japan. This disproves the assertion of the goldbugs that if the Mints of the United States were opened to silver, as they are to gold this country would be made the dumping ground for all the silver in the world. The fact is, there is no nation on earth that has much free silver. The millions of ounces of bullion in the United States Treasury is not for sale. It can be coined, but the Government will not permit that, and it cannot be sold without a special act of Congress authorizing its sale. No foreign bullion is being shipped to Mexico to be coined, and it is not likely that any would be brought to the United States to be coined if the Mints were opened for its coinage. Mexico is prosperous with free coinage, and the United States would be if we followed the example of Mexico.

SOMEbody has told Mr. Bothides that the Silver State copied something General Downing had said about Senator Stewart nine or ten years ago, and the ecstatic Bothides cackles over it like a pullet at the sight of her first egg. Senator Stewart is doing all in his power to relieve the people from the Wall street yoke, and the vapors of the chichadee goldbugs of Nevada only increases his popularity with the masses.

CHILDREN TESTIFY.

Lane Held Under Heavy Bonds.

SAN FRANCISCO, November 21.—Two more little girls testified against Captain Peter Lane, and the old south sea trader was held on the second charge in $15,000. The girls, one of them a pretty little one eleven years old, told of their visits to Lane's room, and of his presents of trinkets to them. They minutely described his actions toward them, and one of them testified that she watched Lane while he was alone with her companion.

Senator Sherman's Opinion.

New York, November 21.—Senator Sherman says he does not know when the Republicans will be able to organize the Senate. When it came to an issue in regard to money he thought the East would be against the West. As long as Cleveland was President, he said, there would be no silver legislation, because he favored sound money.

The Powers Center

CONSTANTINOPLE, November 21.—The six representatives of the Powers held a conference yesterday to discuss certain supplementary measures which will be recommended to the Porte for the restoration of order in Asia Minor, and it is understood that some form of common action for the protection of foreigners is pending.

Lieutenant Koehler of the Ninth Cavalry is accused by the Game Wardens of Wyoming of violating the game laws of the State. The Wardens say they found several deer in the possession of the soldiers. Adjutant General Ward says Lieutenant Koehler will be tried by court-martial.

Mrs. Kate De Kardie was found dead in her bed in San Francisco yesterday from strychnine poisoning. Her husband lay by her side unconscious. He recovered sufficiently to say that he had purchased a bottle of wine and drank some of it. The police think a murder has been committed and look with suspicion on the statement of the husband.

LOCAL AND GENERAL NEWS.

News From Here, There and Every-Where.

A drive of 630 head of cattle from Miller & Lux's island ranch in Oregon arrived at Winnemucca Wednesday night and will be shipped in a few days.

The Inyo Independent says within the last twenty days Henry Miller of the firm of Miller & Lux, has purchased from farmers in this section at least 3,000 tons of hay at an average price of $2 50 per ton.

The Hawthorne Bulletin says General Harrington is still getting nuggets from the Gem in Silver Star. From less than 50 pounds of rock, Col. Stewart last week horned out gold for which he now holds a mint receipt for $1,260.

Dr. W. A. Phillips was called to St. Clair, Churchill county, last evening to attend Mrs. Charles Kinney of that place, who is ill with typhoid fever. The doctor will leave for Wadsworth this morning, where a team is in waiting to take him to St. Clair.

Treasurer Boyd is as busy as can be receiving taxes. Notwithstanding the scarcity of money, it seems that a great many have laid aside a few dollars to meet the payment that must be made. The same old gag of "death and taxes" and "Dan, do you do a credit business?" are repeated many times a day, and Dan laughs each time and pretends to enjoy the old jokes as if they were new, although he has heard them annually for twenty years.

CARSON MINT SHORTAGE.

THE TRIAL OF JAMES HENEY—TENTH DAY.

The Defense Claims Discovery of More Leakage Than Shortage.

(Correspondence of the JOURNAL.)

CARSON CITY, November 21, 1895.

Lawrence Elrod testified as to the character and value of the liquid residue acid returns to the Morgan mill after being used in the Carson mint.

Objected to by the prosecution and objection sustained by the court. Exception taken by the defense.

What Coffin for the defense wanted to prove or bring out was that not less than $54,000 had been specifically and detrimentally lost through the acid returned to the Morgan mill, which was afterward used in the Comstock ore reductions by that mill, resulting in unreasonably higher percentage bullion returns to the Con. Virginia Company from battery assays than ever before.

This testimony was objected to by the prosecution and sustained by the court. Defense filed objections.

Ernest Harris, deposit melter at the mint since Pickler, examined and compared the moulds and bars of the spurious melt in court. He had before handled those same bars and moulds, and unhesitatingly declared that those bars were cast in those very moulds, certain inside defects being shown in evidence. In his judgment those ten shoebars were cast in those same moulds. Those moulds came from the melting department of the mint and have not been in use since. In my judgment those spurious bars were cast in those moulds. Have been a melter off and on since 1880. Never have found a melt that would not melt.

Phil A. Doyle, founder and melter at the V. & T. R. R. works for many years, recognized the bars shown to the jury as the spurious melt. He had studied the points and together with many friends concluded that those bars showing the defects and incidental breakages constituted the noted spurious melt. Found no other bars out of three or four hundred in the mint that fitted those moulds.

James W. Spurgeon testified that he was employed in the mint fourteen years. Henev was doing helper work washing out and sweetening the gold sometimes. Takes two men to do it and I worked with him. Never knew Henev to be there after dark except when he would assist the foreman in doing delayed cupel work. We always changed our clothes entirely and a watchman was at the door as we came out. Know of opportunities for anybody to steal in the refinery and other places if they were so inclined in small quantities. Larger abstractions would be more difficult and dangerous. Gold could have been taken from the sweetening tubs without detection. Never knew Henev to do any special meanness or wrong in anything. Everybody with him had the same opportunities. All sweepings and wasteage went into a big crock for subsequent treatment. Assisted in weighing the bullion on sundry occasions and was present at the mint annual settlement in 1892. Have assisted considerably in handling coin from the mint. As to the mint loss or wasteage I discovered a place where I found some sweetened silver and about ten ounces of granulated gold. This was the last place I hunted.

Where I found the gold was in the tank which receives the waste flow from the chloride tank, and from the sink where the employees wash their hands. The gold I found was in the granulated form, such as results from the sulphuric acid process.

Henev was first employed in the mint in 1889 as coalman. He was in the refinery in 1890 and was silver dissolver when Pearce was foreman. Impossible to steal without others seeing it, and even if a man did steal gold from the sweetening tub the acid would burn a hole in his pocket directly. Long gauntlet rubber gloves are used in handling the sweetening process, as the hands are frequently required to stir or manipulate the metal under treatment. Gold could be abstracted at such times. Never knew of any watchmen on the process other than those engaged in it. Henev and myself frequently ate our lunch together in the refinery. Think I have seen him eat in the cupel room. His lunch was generally brought to him by his sister-in-law. He would go down the first stairs and out through the cellar to the yard and to the fence to receive it, returning the same way. Did so wearing his working clothes. Have frequently met him in the cellar going or returning with his lunch pail. The metal treated in the cupel furnace was such as could not be worked in the refinery on account of its baseness. Henev sometimes stayed after hours to assist Pearce when delayed at the cupel furnace. We all changed all of our clothes when we quit, leaving the mint in our street clothes. Each had a closet or locker where he placed his working clothes, and there were bath tubs in the changing room where we bathed if we liked.

Gold granulation frequently got scattered on the floor, and was recovered by mopping or sweeping. One time I discovered quite a little lot of gold granulations in the small tank into which passes the drainage from the sink where we all washed our hands. There was a couple of tablespoonfuls of it, and it was granulated, like sand. Bradley mopped the floor several times, washing the mop afterward in the sink. He was told by Likens not to do it any more and he obeyed. Likens and myself were the regular silver dissolvers. Henev only acted as such three or four times. He sometimes assisted at the gold sweetening. We generally wore woolen clothing at work, on account of the action of the acids used in the refining. Likens was ex-officio foreman. I have frequently worked with him after hours when required. I have done night work several times all alone Pearce, the regular foreman, frequently coming in. Henev has worked there also at night with Pearce.

The liquid stays in the settling tanks or houses over night, and is siphoned off next morning to within two inches of the sedimentary deposit precipitated at the bottom. It runs out to one of the tanks in the yard. The tank is six or seven feet deep by six feet wide and long. Three feet from the bottom is a hole for outlet to the sewer. The liquid solution is drawn off from the chloride tanks, in refining, sometimes during a week or in five or six weeks, according to use. Anything in solution in the yard tank would have to be acted upon to be precipitated to the bottom. Otherwise it is passed off into the sewer.

P. A. Doyle, recalled—The small figure 4 on some of the Mint bars evidently does not belong to the regular set.

C. H. Galusha sworn—Was with Mr. Doyle recently when all the bars at the Mint were examined. We found three of the shoe bars fitted this mould shown to the jury, and were evidently cast in it, conforming to certain small breaks and peculiarities in the mould. This bar, numbered 164, is one of them, and the marks on it show a large figure 4 on one side and a small one on the other; the same with two or three others.

Lawrence Elrod, recalled—Have been twenty-two years employed at clerical work in the Mint, and am familiar with all the books in the Superintendent's office. Described some of them. This is a book kept in the minting and refining department, showing transactions between him and the Superintendent of all the bullion received and returned. The amount of loss or wasteage allowed by the Government in working the precious metals in the Mint is one ounce of gold on 1,000 ounces and one and one-half ounces of silver on 1,000 ounces.

In the month of June, 1893, the wasteage was eighty-nine ounces, coming within the legal limit. The annual clean-up and settlement at the close of that month was satisfactory to the Government agents sent to attend to it, and clear receipts were given, as was the case with all previous annual settlements. This book is simply a memorandum of receipts in the melter and refiner's department, kept by the weigh clerk. For 1893 it is not balanced up or finished. It shows a deficiency in 1888 of 2,476 ounces gold bullion and in 1891 1,689 ounces more. I was present and assisted in the annual settlement of June, 1893. The spurious melt was passed through without detection from appearance or handling. A bar 482½ fine in gold simply looks like plain silver. When a lot of bullion comes to the Mint the first question is whether to receive it as a silver or gold deposit. Above or below 500 fine degrees whether it shall be received and recorded as a gold or silver deposit.

Witness explained how the original number 77 on the spurious melt was changed to 164 on the record book, classing it as a silver instead of a gold deposit. Then followed a long discussion and explanation in examination of the various books and figures.

A diagram showing the plan of the deposit melting room and the melter and refiner's office, and adjoining arrangements were next exhibited to the jury.

In the settlement of 1893 J. T. Jones was present and saw the bullion weighed and checked off. Morgan and Hassam were present as agents for the Government, and Morgan personally saw that the actual weight of each bar or melt corresponded with the marks on each.

Then followed another long and intricate dissection of the various mint books and figures including the annual settlements, the various mills, etc., many discrepancies, omissions and clerical errors being shown. Witness said that from his knowledge and mint experience he did not know how to account for this shortage found in gold and silver.

John T. Jones, sworn—This book shown me is the consolidation melts record. It is not the book kept when I come into the mint. It is incorrect and incomplete as I found when I tried to trace up that spurious melt. I could not find either it or the missing small gold bar number 166. The spurious melt came in under Zabrick's administration and the missing gold bar under Harris. That book could never be made to balance. This one shown me was prepared and kept by myself in place of it and can be relied upon as being correct.

Court adjourned till 10 A. M. to-morrow.

KENNEDY DISTRICT.

An Important Mining Sale in Humboldt County.

The Silver State says one of the most important mining sales which has taken place this year in Humboldt County was consummated yesterday in the transfer of the Gold Note group of claims in Kennedy by the Shamrock Company to J. A. Blossom of Battle Mountain. Mr. Blossom has owned a quarter interest in the claims for some time, but has never taken any active interest in the working. The Gold Note has been a paper from its first discovery, and is no doubt a very valuable property, as it is now looking better than at any time in the past. The sale covers everything, even the forty tons of ore now here on the depot platform for shipment, which will go over $100 per ton. This sale means much for Kennedy, as Mr. Blossom is one of the best rustlers in the country, and with such a good mine to work on will no doubt soon make it a dividend payer, or sell it to some strong company who will commence large developments upon it.

Heart Palpitation

Cured by Hood's Sarsaparilla. "I had what is called palpitation of the heart; it never left me for a moment. Sometimes I would almost fall over, and could not stay in a close room or a crowd of people. Physicians did not do me any good; in fact, I seemed to be growing worse all the time until I began to take Hood's Sarsaparilla. I was soon better, and after taking 3 bottles, I was perfectly cured. My wife is taking Hood's Sarsaparilla for rheumatism, and it is doing her more good than all other medicine."
